was to send back aid to the Dutch woman, who was on the way. She came upon a hunter, who told her which she had found food and an old leather breeches, and that she had the old, worn-out bell about the neck of the horse. The hunter, however, was threatening to take her to the mountain path. The Dutch woman, for history, started for her home, soon recovered her senses, and her husband was never heard from after that. The English recovered their eldest boy, but they did not soon after lose the mother. Of the Dutch woman, found a trace, though father and son searched far and wide. Mrs. Ingles and her children, and her descendants, several of whom were living in the city, and widely scattered all over the United States, and in the Ohio valley of them. Her grandson, has written of the story of her life.

gles, because of her deftness in needle work, was kept in the Shawnee town, but her two little boys were taken to Detroit, and the other captives parceled out, here and there. Mrs. Ingles was in a few days compelled to go with a party down the river to the salt springs at Big Bone Lick, in Kentucky, about fifty miles below the mouth of the Scioto and three miles back from the Ohio.

All this time the hope of escape was ever present in her mind. She believed

PITTSBURG, July 2.—George Watson, Jr., of New York City, a well known horseman, lies injured today in a local hospital, the result of being thrown from his mount which stumbled while taking a fence on the Harkaway Hunt club's course at McDonald, Pa. His injuries, while serious, will not terminate fatally.

work in the United States of military instruction was begun today by the 5000 regulars and militiamen now in camp on the famous battlefield here. The camp, which was formally opened yesterday, the forty-seventh anniversary of the first day's fighting here, is in command of Brigadier General William H. Wither-
